Your Extraordinary

I was blessed to be raised in a very purposeful and successful family who helped me discover much of what I was created to do by the time I was twelve years old. Even with that, it took time to become crystal clear about who I am and what I am called to focus on completing in my lifetime.

What about those of you who are still trying to get clarity about what you were created to do and how you were to complete it? This eBook is for you.

I loved horses growing up. I collected horse models that I named and played with incessantly. I had horse barns for them and built horse families. My love for horses was so strong that I begged my parents for my very own horse...that is, until I found out I was extremely allergic to real horses after my parents arranged for us to visit a colleague's horse barn. My eyes and face itched and my throat almost completely swelled up. That ended my requests for my own horse.

But my love of horses continued. When Disney came out with its version of the story depicting the greatest horse of all time in 2010, Secretariat, I remember running to the theater to see that movie. I was moved to tears. It touched something deep within me.

Secretariat was bred for greatness beyond what had ever or has ever been witnessed in the history of horse racing. He always came from behind and passed the crowded field of horses and their miniature jockeys. It took great courage and steel-like determination and focus on the part of his owner, Penny Chenery, to race him. Against all odds, Secretariat was given the chance to “run his race” and the perfect combination of speed, stamina, and distance converged to finally allow Secretariat to run on all cylinders. He left the crowd in awed tears that day.

Running your race is critical because there is greatness in you and until you run it out, you have no idea how far you can go. The movie, Secretariat, focused on the faith it took for the whole team to make it happen.

What would your life look like if you knew, without a doubt, what you were built for?

There is something you were created to bring forth into the world that is different from the other 7.347 billion people in the world. This is your Extraordinary.

You are a specific aspect of the overall vision for the world, and you carry specific pieces to achieve your highest and best use for the world. Your part in this is to go through the process to become the person you were created to be.

Your Extraordinary is the clear lane for which you were created to run your race.

Your Extraordinary is the highest call on your life when you have manifested all that has been placed within you to bring forth in the world. It is the building of something evident (a successful business, a thriving ministry, a large non-profit organization, etc.), which is a result of your faithful obedience, tenacity, and persistence to see your Extraordinary come into fruition. It is something big that will leave an impact on all who come into contact with you and what you are building.

When you are clear about your Extraordinary, you can literally transcend the circumstances of your life. You focus forward and keep your mind only on things that contribute to and further your vision. You become unshakable and completely clear on what every day of your life needs to look like to complete the vision to which you have been called. You live with joy permeating every aspect of your being. Even your not-so-good days are fabulous because you are operating in obedience.

Your passion is evident, and you are truly plugged into the power and love that is within you.

Your ability to clearly understand your Extraordinary can be the difference between living a life of joy, peace, excitement, and fulfillment or a life of frustration, repetition, depression, distraction, and disappointment.

When you are focusing only on fulfilling your Extraordinary, you treat each day as a precious gift—another opportunity to close the gap between who you were created to be and who you are right now. I call this living in “the zone.” When you are in this zone, you have absolutely no time or space for pettiness, “haters,” limitations, or inefficiency. You easily identify and embrace your shortcomings and do not allow them to slow you down so you can continually move forward. You are focused on consistent, incremental improvements in every area of your life.

When you are walking in your Extraordinary, you walk in certainty and power, and your focus is on continuous quality improvement. You simply do not have time to play small, hesitate, hold back, or water down things to make others comfortable. When you fully express your Extraordinary, it frees others up to really go for it!

Your Extraordinary is the biggest and best possible life that has been planned for you. I am astounded at how many people are not living their Extraordinary because they are not clear about what sets them apart. Fully tapping into your true Extraordinary is a process, but this eBook is about helping you understand WHY you are extraordinary. Not in a rah-rah, motivational way, but from a place of deep knowing and peace.

Your Extraordinary is the assignment that was placed inside of you to complete in your lifetime. Living from this place pulls you forward and shifts you from striving to expressing your greatness with no apology. Where do you begin?

I am astounded at how many people are not living their Extraordinary because they are not clear about what sets them apart.

THE PROCESS

Your Extraordinary assignment is inside of you. It does not come from another person because they will only have a shadow of understanding of who you were created and destined to be in spite of the circumstances of your life.

Your circumstances, no matter how difficult or challenging they have been, have prepared and equipped you to fulfill your Extraordinary. Because of the circumstances of your life, you may not have even been aware that you truly have an assignment with your name written on it. In addition, you may have never understood the meaning and components of the Extraordinary. Let's clarify this once and for all.

When I first began coaching leaders in 2001, I used to think that vision, purpose, passion, calling, and destiny were different words for the same thing. I have since learned that they are related, but not the same. These are different aspects of your Extraordinary, and they are not synonymous.

It is critical to understand these components because you can be purposely living your vision and still miss fulfilling all of your Extraordinary. Before you can walk out the fullness of your Extraordinary, you must first understand each component that makes up your Extraordinary.

These components are vision, purpose, calling, your story of destiny, desires of your heart, passion, gifts and talents, and area of service. If you do not understand how each of these aspects function, you can miss walking in and fully expressing your Extraordinary.

Let's go into some detail about what each of these aspects of your Kingdom Assignment actually mean.

THE EIGHT COMPONENTS OF YOUR EXTRAORDINARY

Aspect 1 = Vision

Aspect 2 = Purpose

Aspect 3 = Calling

Aspect 4 = Path of Destiny or Story

Aspect 5 = Desires of Your Heart

Aspect 6 = Passion

Aspect 7 = Gifts and Talents

1 - Vision

There are so many different uses of the word “vision” that I need to take a moment to clarify its meaning in the context of your Extraordinary. Vision is the ultimate conception of what is possible for your life. Vision is the big picture of what it will look like to fully manifest all you were born to do. Vision is a prophetic snapshot of of you fully expressing what makes you amazing. Your vision is what it will look like to realize 100% of your potential.

Vision chooses you. It was predetermined for you when you were born. It is the life that has already been designed for you. You cannot model your vision after someone else’s vision. It is yours and yours alone. You cannot choose your vision; it is already assigned to you. Your job is to uncover it and take action. Your life’s adventure is to discover it and build something that makes an impact and leaves a legacy.

I remember when I began realizing my vision. I was twelve years old, and my sister talked me into running for class vice president. I had to prepare a speech to deliver in front of the entire seventh grade class. I clearly remember looking up into the bleachers and seeing the faces of all of my friends, acquaintances, and teachers and feeling no nervousness at all. I stood at the table-top podium and delivered my speech. Although I do not remember exactly what I said, I vividly remember the reaction my words received from the crowd. My classmates were standing on their feet cheering, screaming, and letting out piercing whistles of excitement.

I stood there dazed for a moment as I fully grasped that their reaction was in response to my speech. It was at that moment that I understood that God had given me a gift of speaking and sharing a message that would leave people changed. I also realized that I was most comfortable speaking in front of a crowd—the more the better. That was the first glimpse of my vision as a speaker.

You may have several dimensions or aspects of your vision that come together to form the fullness of your vision. It is usually multifaceted. It is enough to keep you busy for a lifetime when you focus on making it happen.

Vision is a glimpse of what different parts of your Extraordinary will look like after you put in the time and work that is necessary to bring it forth.

Your vision is different from your dreams. Although your dreams are a good starting place to begin to access your God-given vision, they are just the beginning. Dreams open up your imagination and ability for your mind to “see” what can be conceived for your life. Many of us model our dreams after the lives of others. Your dreams open the doorway and provide some clues to the eight keys to your Extraordinary.

I actually do not like using the term “dreams.” It is another throwback to the good old days of motivational speakers who encouraged you to dream but did not show you how to actually achieve your dreams. The other reason I hesitate to talk much about dreams is that they are usually rooted in materialism and your flesh, and they are in response to your past or current circumstances. Dreams acknowledge the surface or material things you may want or desire and only begin to scratch the surface of what you are here to do for others. You have been dreaming; it is now time to gain the clarity you need to truly manifest your Extraordinary.

Your vision is very specific. More and more of it will unfold as you carry out the pieces that you already know to do. At the end of your life, what do you want to be known for? What do you want your legacy to be?

Take a few minutes to get still, close your eyes, and allow yourself to see the fullness of what your life could be if ALL of your potential could come to fruition. It is already within you. Just let it reveal itself and then take some time to answer this question:

What is your vision?

Once you identify your vision, the next step is to clarify your purpose.

2 - Purpose

The second aspect of your Extraordinary is purpose. Your purpose tells you the theme of your life and helps you live it intentionally. Purpose is the WHY or reason behind your vision. It is always bigger than your personal desires. Purpose is what fuels and inspires you to do whatever it takes to see your vision come to pass.

Why do you want to build in this particular area? It is not just about bringing a vision to pass; it is about why your vision will make an impact in the world. It is the reason your vision exists.

Your purpose guides or steers your passion (see the Passion section of this eBook). Purpose explains your method or why you will carry out your Extraordinary.

With clarity around your why, you begin to clearly understand your specific purpose and how to get the fuel to achieve it.

Perhaps you were born to make a difference by alleviating hunger or helping neglected animals. Your purpose gives you a general idea and direction to move in, but by itself it is not the whole picture.

Understanding why you want to make a difference is your purpose. Now it is your turn. Take a moment to answer these questions:

What is the purpose of your vision? WHY do you want to see your vision come to pass?

Now that your vision and purpose are becoming clearer, let us move on to articulating your calling.

be extraordinary

3 - Calling

Calling is the third aspect of your Extraordinary. I also refer to your calling as your altitude. Altitude is the extent or distance upward or the height and breadth of your vision and purpose. You can think of it as the scope of your vision and purpose.

Your calling or altitude is the scope of your Extraordinary (local, citywide, state, region, nation, or world). You can have fifty people who are called to be business owners in the fashion industry, but the altitudes, or the height, scope, and breadth of what they are called to do, will be different for each business. One may be called to create a successful, local clothing boutique, while another will be called to manufacture an entire line of clothing and wholesale it globally.

Your calling was placed in what I call your spiritual DNA. It is not something you can glean from someone else. It is not something of someone else's you can covet. It is unique to how you were built and wired. You will know if you are not fulfilling your altitude or scope of work if you cannot sleep at night because you are trying to think of ways to catapult the calling within you to reach more and more people within particular territories or locations. Although it takes time to expand your calling, you know you are supposed to keep going higher and higher, reaching more and more because you will not be satisfied where you are. This does not come from a place of ego. It comes from a deeper directive.

The height of your calling is how high you were born to go in the area of your vision. You will not have peace until you build at the level of your calling.

The scope of your calling is the specific number of lives you are called to impact. Are you called to impact 100 lives or 10,000 lives? Or a million? This is inside of you. It is not something you would “like” to do. It is something you have to do to fulfill your calling.

The breadth of what you are called to do is how deep you are supposed to go with people. You can build something extraordinary by creating a product that makes people look better, such as a cosmetic. Or you could be called to move in transformation and to go deep with people to help them get to the core of things and create something completely different from what they have been experiencing.

One is not better than the other. It is just important to allow yourself to get clarity on it so you know what you are to be expressing with your life.

Focus on the specific height, scope, and breadth. You will be completely fulfilled carrying out your calling even though others may be doing similar work on a broader or more narrow scale.

Stop here for a moment. Take a deep breath and allow the answer to the following question to rise to the surface of your being.

How far, wide, and high is God calling you to take your vision and purpose?

4 – Your Story of Destiny

Destiny is the predetermined course or order of the events that you have needed to walk out throughout your life. This is better known as your story. Everyone's path of destiny or story is different. It is uniquely yours and yours alone. There is no one else in the world who has lived your story.

Your destiny is the predetermined path God created for your life. It seems like your path of destiny or your story is random or fully based on free will, but it is made up of something much deeper. It includes every bump and bruise, triumph, highlight, choice, and direction that the twists and turns of your life have taken.

Your path of destiny is the specific order of the lessons and experiences the Lord allows to train, equip, develop, and prepare you to carry the fullness of your vision, purpose, and calling.

While your vision is what you are manifesting, your destiny is the road you walk to get to the manifestation. There are many paths to manifest vision, but the path that God uniquely equips, tests, trains, and gives you the capacity to walk is your destiny.

While it may seem that circumstances you have experienced have been a coincidence or happenstance, they have not. It has all been orchestrated to strengthen you to walk out your destiny.

Although free will can shift your path, as long as you are moving forward, you will continue to be steered on the pathway that has been created for you to fulfill. Think of destiny as the internal GPS system that God has placed within you. You might take wrong turns, make a few bad or wrong decisions, or appear to get temporarily derailed along the way, but you are always being guided toward the destination of fulfilling your Extraordinary.

Your destiny is not just the manifestation of who you are created to become; it is the pathway or process of how you are designed to get there. The key to staying on your intended path of destiny is continuing to do your best, showing up in your life even when it gets difficult, and following your inner compass that was placed inside of you to guide your way.

Your path of destiny is the specific order of lessons and experiences needed to train, equip, develop, empower, and prepare you to carry the fullness of your Extraordinary.

Your destiny builds your character. It calls forth particular lessons and circumstances that you need to grow and develop in order to carry the weight of your vision, calling, and purpose. Your path of destiny teaches you the lessons you need to learn along your way. This is a huge part of what makes you so amazing.

While your vision is what you are manifesting, your story of destiny is the road you have walked to become the person who has the capacity to carry out your Extraordinary until it comes to pass. There are many paths to manifest your vision, but the path you are on is uniquely designed and tested to build your capacity to manifest something extraordinary. That is your path of destiny or your story.

Take the time to answer the following questions so you can begin to see how your path of destiny dances with your vision, purpose, and calling:

What are the five most challenging things you have had to overcome?

What are the five most triumphant and proud moments of your life?

What would your current self tell your sixteen-year-old self?

All of your answers to these questions combine to become your story or path of destiny. There were no mistakes in your life. Just choices and lessons learned.

5 - Desires of Your Heart

Now that we have discussed your vision, purpose, calling, and path of destiny, it is time to move on to the fifth component of vision—the desires of your heart. A desire is a longing or craving for something that brings satisfaction or enjoyment. There is a chamber deep inside of your heart that has remained covered and protected from the hurts, lies, emotional wounds, and disappointments of your past. This deep chamber holds the desires of your heart. When this chamber is uncovered, it reveals the true desires of your heart.

The desires of your heart are made up of those things for which you deeply long, desire, and are willing to work for. The desires of your heart compel you in a way that will not let you go. These desires go beyond your mindset, knowledge, or material wants to what is actually inside of your heart. These desires go beyond your life experiences to encompass who you were created to be, and they work alongside of the other components of your Extraordinary.

The desires of your heart are actually what is written on the tablet of your heart in the spiritual realm (see my book, Your Heart is the Key for the full teaching on this revelation). When you are focused on understanding your Extraordinary, the desires of your heart begin to come into manifestation. The key to what you are seeking lies in understanding and implementing your Extraordinary.

When building your Extraordinary is at the center of your life, everything—and I do mean every aspect of your life—moves into its proper place and order. For this shift to occur, your Extraordinary has to come from the desires of your heart. When your Extraordinary is not the center of your life, it usually results in less-than-satisfactory outcomes that leave you feeling frustrated and unfulfilled.

Everything your heart desires lies in focusing eighty percent or more of your time, energy, and effort in understanding and implementing your Extraordinary.

Stop. Right here. Right now. Stop. Take some deep breaths. Now, tune into your heart. Focus inward on your heart space and just observe what is hanging out in your heart. Underneath the frustrations, past hurts, and emotional wounds lie the deep desires that have been placed inside of you.

What are the top three desires of your heart?

What do you long to see in other's lives?

What would a deeply fulfilling life look like for you?

6 - Passion

Let us talk about the sixth component of your Extraordinary—passion. Passion is having a strong or extravagant fondness, enthusiasm, or desire for something. Passion is the fuel that drives you to keep persevering until you complete your Extraordinary. Your passion consists of those things that bring you joy, excitement, and energy when you are doing them. When you are operating in your passion, you experience a flow and effortlessness that makes it easier to stay the course.

When you are passionate, you are excited, inspired, motivated, focused, and fulfilled. Unlike what the world tells you, you cannot build what you were created to do and complete in your lifetime on passion alone.

Passion helps you stay engaged, excited, and in alignment with all it takes to build your Extraordinary. It is your passion that keeps you going even when things do not seem to be going your way. It is passion that encourages you to keep working toward your Extraordinary whether you are in a season of harvest or drought.

Perhaps you love seeing those around you fulfilled and enjoy the looks on their faces after a great meal you have prepared. You may want to share this passion with others by opening a new restaurant. Maybe you are passionate about helping people make money through their businesses. Or perhaps you love hearing the voices of people in the listening audience when something you say on your radio show improves their lives.

What do you love doing? What juices you? What are you passionate about?

Now that you have clarified your vision, purpose, calling, path of destiny, the desires of your heart, and your areas of passion, it is time to move on to the seventh component of your Extraordinary.

7 - Gifts and Talents

The next aspects of vision to talk about are your gifts and talents. Your gifts are those things that just come naturally to you and are not actually taught; they were deposited inside of you. If you did go to school to learn more about them, you probably excelled in them or you were bored because it came so easily to you.

Realizing your gifts is like trying to see your right arm or your foot as something unique when it is with you continuously, and you can do it with little or no effort. Talking, shopping, understanding technology, being skilled with math and numbers, drawing, being funny, discerning spirits, writing, exercising, dancing, and being organized are just a few examples of gifts. You are usually already spending time in the area of your gifting.

Gifts are sometimes challenging to identify and distinguish because they are such a part of you. Hidden in your gifts are the additional clues you need to understand the methods God has given you to make a difference in your area of purpose.

Yet gifts are only half of this component. The other half of this component is your talent.

What are you great at?

What comes naturally to you with little or no effort?

Talents

Your talent consists of those things you are naturally good at but need to practice developing to perfect and make them great. Your talent teaches you the skills necessary to walk in your gift. Together, your gifts and talents create an additional dimension to understanding and mastering your specific Extraordinary.

I am a good writer but in order to be great and reveal my passion and purpose, I have to practice, read a lot, and write several drafts before I can capture on paper what I am really trying to say (as well as, have the help of a great editor). With my primary gift being speaking and not writing, I have had to read countless books about writing and have taken many classes to improve my skills. Yet, when I speak, I can develop thoughts coherently in my mind instantaneously and deliver them with clarity, depth, and power the first time with little or no effort.

Musicians who can play by ear have a gift. It comes easily and they could effortlessly and passionately do it the rest of their lives. But in order to be on the performance platforms of their heart's desires, they need to develop the talent or skill of reading and writing music so others can learn their music, and it can be as extraordinary as it was designed to be.

The challenge with talent is making sure you use it to further your vision instead of getting stuck trying to make a living on your talent alone. While you may be good at it, your talent alone does not feed your passion and usually does not touch the depth of the desires of your heart in a way that will fulfill you for the rest of your life. I hear many stories about people getting stuck making a living from their talent alone and their story usually begins with something like this, “I am an accountant and yes, it pays the bills, and I am good at it, but it is not what I really want to do.”

You have probably heard stories of actors or singers who tried to live on their talent alone and never connected with the other six components of their extraordinary. They are the ones who were once a hit and now appear on “Where Are They Now” television segments. Your talent is a way for you to bring forth your purpose. You were not meant to get too comfortable working only with your gifts and talents.

What are you good at but need to work at in order to be great and effectively operate in your gifting?

There is one more aspect of your Extraordinary to take into consideration.

8 – Your Target Market

You were created to impact a particular group of people with specific characteristics, mindsets, psychographics, and demographics. Part of your Extraordinary is to identify, gather, inform, and take care of your target market. I think of my target market as those I am assigned and called to. I hold a special place in their lives and need to show up and love on them on a regular basis.

You help them stay on track in the area in which you are called and gifted. Your target market recognizes and responds to your voice, gifting, and experiences. Your target market is waiting to hear your voice, teachings, insights, and experience your products or services. If you are not actively caring for and overseeing your target market, I challenge you to step up in this area. No one can love on them like you can.

Your target market consists of those you are called to lead and impact. It is the particular target audience or group of people for whom you are uniquely wired and designed. Another way to think about your area of service is as your special niche. It is your responsibility to know your target market and what you have to offer them that will be a solution to their pain and problems.

Be specific. Are they special needs children from wealthy families? Perhaps adults striving to create wealth? Or maybe people with a passion for collecting and restoring Ford Mustangs? No matter who it is, they are waiting for you.

What group(s) of people are in your heart to impact?

What specific group(s) of people do you most enjoy working with?

Who were you born to serve?

Once you have thought deeply about your target market, make a list of what your target market needs. Do they need a one-stop shop website that gives them resources to carry out their missions? What topics do they need to know more about? What questions do they ask on social media? What information do they need to be successful? What products would they purchase?

What does your target market need?

What do they need from you to help them be more successful?

What do you have inside of you to answer their needs?

It is your responsibility to know your target market and what you have to offer them that will be a solution to their pain and problems.

You need to get busy providing for your target market right now. Now is your time. It is not about you. It is about what you've been through that people need. They need to hear your challenges. They need to hear your triumphs. It is time for you to urgently bring forth your Extraordinary life and prosper from your good works. Can you feel it? Your target market has been trying to get your attention. It's time to respond bigger and bolder than you ever have before.

Now that you know all eight of the keys to identifying your Extraordinary, it is time to truly commit to it like never before. No holding back. No watering it down. No playing small. No more waiting. It's GO time!

COMMITTING TO YOUR EXTRAORDINARY

It is time to commit to moving closer and closer to completing your Extraordinary each and everyday. It takes a serious, unwaivering, tenacious, persistent commitment to see this through to transform your potential into something extraordinary that impacts the world. It takes time and overcoming to develop the capacity to access, understand, and carry more of your Extraordinary. Remember, more and more of your Extraordinary is revealed with each bold step forward you take.

Your Extraordinary unfolds over time. It would be too much for you to receive all at once. It would be so big that you would not say yes and fully commit to the process, and it is important to remember that it is a process.

Your Extraordinary is not revealed all at once. It slowly unfolds and reveals itself to you with each fearless and faithful step you take.

When you commit to bringing forth the fullness (not a watered-down version) of your Extraordinary, you will receive everything intended for you. You will receive all of the spiritual, emotional, and physical blessings as well. When you first seek your Extraordinary, you enter into a realm of multiplication. Everything you need to fulfill your Extraordinary will come forth with ease and overflow...if you stay the course.

Now it is time to put it into action. Here's to living your Extraordinary!
You can DO this!!!

IT'S TIME TO UNLEASH YOUR INNER SUPERHERO

Once you really spend some time answering the questions I posed to you throughout this eBook, the next step is for you to truly become unshakeable in your identity and get in touch with your true identity.
